Trakm8 Integrates GPS products with Motorola Secure Radio Network

25th May - Trakm8, the AIM-listed technology provider, designer and developer of hardware and software to the vehicle tracking and security market is pleased to announce that it has successfully partnered with Motorola to integrate its GPS tracking products with Motorola's Astro radio network.

The initial impact on sales was not envisaged to be material however associated contract wins by Motorola have led to over 1,000 units being shipped to Motorola since March 2007. Whilst future demand is not guaranteed the Board are confident that this exciting development will positively impact Trakm8's business going forward.

Trakm8 has worked closely with Motorola to integrate its Trakm8 Solo hardware platform with the Motorola Astro radio network. The combined system will provide GPS positions and internet packet data via a secure communications network and is therefore ideally suited to emergency and security services markets. Motorola are deploying the system globally and the orders delivered to date reflect Motorola's commitment to this product.

Tim Cowley, Solutions Director of Trakm8 commented,

"With Trakm8's deep understanding of the technology we are able to move extremely quickly from the design phase to the installation phase. This speed of response enables Motorola to quickly deliver flexible solutions for opportunities as they arise. Trakm8 are continually looking for new and exciting ways to provide turnkey solutions for our partners and this technically challenging solution has been quickly deployed due to the innovation and expertise that both organizations possess. We look forward to developing our partnership with Motorola in the future."
